

Home Again

The children thanked the king for the bird and set out for home. When they got there, everybody was happy to have them back. They were also happy to have the golden eggs. The family was rich now. The children could think of lots of hard problems about the bird and the golden eggs.

